SECTION I

INTRODUCTION

The Anglo-American Combined Bomber Offensive (hereinafter referred to as "CBO") during World War II was selected as a strategy of massive and systematic bombing of German war related factories and cities in order to destroy the German military industrial and economic system and to undermine the morale of the German people to a point where their capacity for armed resistance would be fatally weakened. (8:135; 9:97; 10:28;

1/2 of THESIS

1:80) This paper analyzes the military strategy of the CBO using the six basic questions history suggests that strategist must ask before war (the "Crowl Questions") and then evaluates the air campaign strategy using the "Principles of War" as a framework. (2:24; 20:123) to show what?

WHY CBO WAS SUCCESS OR FAILURE OTHER HALF OF THESIS.

This framework is useful to analyze the development of a historical military strategy by examining the impact of factors, beginning with the threat confronting a nation or coalition of nations, on the national interests involved, then how that threat influenced the political and military leadership, and in turn, the national policy, in formulating the objective and ultimate strategy. (3:28; 20:123) This analysis will use the framework to show how various factors influenced the development of the strategy of the CBO, why that strategy was used, and the reasons for its successes and its failures.

You never gave any, unlike 1st paragraph which describes why it was selected.
